Schutzhund is a dog sport that focuses on developing and evaluating the legendary traits in German Shepherds. The development of these traits makes them the trustworthiest dogs to the community and owner. The purpose of Schutzhund is to demonstrate and test the dogs' intelligence and utility. It also measures and ensures the dogs' mental stability, endurance, physical structure, ability to scent, willingness to work, courage and trainability. Members from the West Coast Club have placed first in the Canadian German Shepherd Dog Championships 8 times, and have been chosen to represent Canada at the WUSV World Championships 28 times. What Is Schutzhund? Schutzhund training has three parts: Tracking, Obedience, and Protection. The Tracking portion tests a dog's trainability, ability to follow a scent, and mental and physical endurance. In the Obedience portion, dogs perform a variety of exercises such as heeling, sitting, retrieving, and remaining steady during distractions. The Protection portion tests the dog's courage, strength, and obedience by requiring the dog to find a hidden person and defend its owner against a decoy aggressor. Schutzhund training and trials take place around the world. Schutzhund dogs are excellent candidates for canine law enforcement and search and rescue work. Although Schutzhund training is for all breeds, German Shepherd Dogs particularly excel due to their intelligence, their bravery, and their desire to please their masters.
