Have you ever been stopped when entering a business because of your service dog? Uninformed employees with the best of intentions are sometimes unaware of the federal laws for service dogs. This can cause an embarrassing and frustrating situation for everyone. Here is a simple and effective tool for all service dog owners. When you enter a business and one of the employees approach you about your service animal, you can simply hand them a Service Animal Information Card. Instead of having to remember and repeat the federal guidelines regarding service dogs to the store employee, the Service Animal Information Card will give them all the information they need to know about the Americans with Disabilities Act as it relates to Service Animals, in one convenient place. The front of the card says "Service Dogs: What Your Business Needs to Know" and states that your dog is a Service Dog - an animal individually trained to perform tasks for people with disabilities. The toll free phone number to the U.S. Department of Justice is also listed on the card should the business owner have more questions. The back of the card summarizes the Americans with Disabilities Act as it relates to Service Dogs. It also outlines the questions businesses can and cannot ask.
